

ABSTRACT

An arrangement for using a mobile communication service comprising a mobile communication system, which comprises base stations for transmitting services formed of one or more service contents, the arrangement further

- 5 comprising one or more mobile stations connected to the base station. At least one mobile station comprises means for sending a transmission request for the desired service content, the arrangement further comprising means for maintaining a transmission queue of service contents; means for receiving a transmission request for the desired service content; means for registering the
- 10 received transmission request in the transmission queue; means for reading the service content having the transmission turn from the transmission queue when the service is transmitted; means for sending the service content to all mobile stations located in the service area of the base station and logged in to receive service content.

- 15 (Figure 1)